Comments: If the Toll road goes ahead, there will continue to be as many vehicles on the roads as will fit, however much widening and re-routing is done. Pollution will be even worse than now, creating a generation of children living in these areas who cannot perform to the best of their ability, because of asthma and general poor health. Road rage may increase, especially during the five-year construction period, as drivers find their travel times are even slower. AND the ELEPHANTS-IN-THE-ROOM that are being missed are that it would be a great opportunity to make it advantageous to the public to use electric or hybrid vehicles and to persuade planners (even Transurban) to radically improve the Public Transport System.
